For western shooting enthusiasts, Henry presents a lever action rifle in 22LR caliber for more economical recreational shooting.

Faithful to its heritage, this underguard lever rifle uses the original Henry system with an external hammer that the breech cocks, as well as a tubular magazine. The latter can hold up to 9 shots and is reloaded from the front thanks to an opening in the tube. Once inserted, the brass pusher, containing the feed spring, locks the assembly.

Chambered for shooting the widely used .22 LR, this underguard lever rifle can also fire .22 Long and .22 Short. This allows you to enjoy very pleasant subsonic performance without requiring the use of a silencer.

A must-have to enrich your firearm collection

It is well known that sports shooters value precision. Whether using a .308 Win bolt-action rifle or a CZ SP01 Shadow, the beauty of group shooting embodies the nobility of our discipline. However, who could object to a little diversion from time to time? Who wouldn't feel the occasional urge to have fun with a challenging and dynamic weapon without spending a fortune?

Features

Despite its sobriety, the Henry Classic Lever Action benefits from a magnificent American walnut stock. Its 46 cm barrel is made of bronzed steel and harmonizes perfectly with the painted alloy case. Some might criticize the use of steel, deemed unnecessary for a caliber as mild as the .22 LR, in our opinion.

By putting aside the artifices, Henry concentrates on the essential: the pleasure of shooting. The softness of the wood caresses the shooter's hand, the weapon is shouldered and aimed naturally with great ease. The remarkable mechanical fluidity of the underguard lever should also be highlighted. This is simply astonishing for a weapon of this price.

The sights encourage rapid fire, an invitation that is difficult to resist. The blade front sight is protected by a steel tunnel, while the rear sight is adjustable in height and windage. For optics enthusiasts, an 11mm rail is provided to accommodate a riflescope.

In summary, it is a total success which demonstrates that American manufacturing can offer quality while controlling its costs. A rare opportunity not to be missed.
